The new addition of FIFA Ultimate Team has been highly praised by its community and takes EA Sports' popular card game and introduces it to the next generation of FIFA players. Over 225 cards can be unlocked in the game (roughly 1 in every 10 cards in FIFA 19) including over 30 new cards, all featuring the look of the new superstar Cristiano Ronaldo. Five new player licenses have also been added to FIFA Ultimate Team: Lionel Messi, N'Golo Kanté, Paul Pogba, Ousmane Dembélé and Ronaldo. Further the new "Player Recommendation System" allows for the creation of ultimate player line-ups like Messi - Ronaldo and Messi - Di Maria. Finally, you can easily scour players in depth by allowing you to view in-depth statistics for every player including the ability to recommend players to your friends in FUT. Community Creation - A brand new "Community Create" feature has been created giving users the ability to use their own creativity to create their own FIFA Ultimate Team packs of cards and bring them to life in FUT. We've also implemented the ability to share your collections with other FUT users and we've added many other community features to FIFA Ultimate Team including the ability to see results of upcoming tournaments and competitions in real-time, access to new FIFA Ultimate Team packs while they are available, and the ability to transfer your cards to other games. The VAR Functionality (Video Assistant Referee) has been rebuilt from the ground up, making it easier for players to identify potential fouls, using a combination of broadcast footage, referee communication, and player feeds. The VAR System is fully integrated with FIFA Ultimate Team, which means you can use Ultimate Team cards to purchase VAR Credits in FIFA Ultimate Team while playing a friendly match, which can then be used to purchase VAR functionality at the club level. Game Modes - A brand new 4-way free-kick system and the ability to set up free-kicks in real-time have been added. Smaller touches have been added to game modes including a taker kicking the ball while already in possession, plus the ability to mark players that have drifted out of your direct path, or given up possession. Goalkeepers can now also forget about the use of their hands and instead move their body to reach balls. Pace of play has been increased, making matches faster and more fluid. The game is also fully customizable and new short

What's new:

- Changes and improvements to passing and shooting mechanics.
- Improved ball control with a more responsive, tactile cue - the flight and textures of the ball have been improved to make you feel like a true baller.
- Improved near post heading mechanics. Goalkeepers now react more aggressively to headers in the air and thus jump toward the ball, while goalkeepers with the passing Target Control System can switch directions mid-pass.
- See more on-field action with Imax camera angles. Injuries will be seen on the pitch more accurately; ball contacts are clearer, and individual players display more of their individuality in how they move.
- Wingers can now combine attacks with overlapping runs. Wide midfielders will have more range to receive and switch the play.

FIFA (from Fooball Inside American?) is an interesting game. It's a football game of course, but it's also about a football board game, and then there's a playing pieces game. The game itself is about making that last turn to shoot for the goalie to score a goal that you've planned all along. FIFA is fun. You're the coach. You're the man, you tell your team to move where you want them, and make them move in the way you want them to move, and if they're not doing the thing you want them to do, it's down to you to change their decisions, and to send them on a journey that will make them fall in line with your team's ideas. You have tons of ways to take command of the squad, and you have the tools at your disposal to make sure you really drive your style of play through to the team. You'll make them run, or make them retreat, or make them drift, or even get to the other team's half to attack. As long as you're having fun doing it, and you're in command, the game is pretty fair. The basics The idea behind FIFA is that you're running your team against the opposition, and you get points for a variety of things, like the number of times you win a corner kick. It starts off in a relaxed way, with your players talking about their goings-on in the dressing room. By the time the match starts you'll have a full team, and you'll have a load of tactics at your disposal. You're set to lose the match, for example, or you might be set to score three times in a particular minute. These are the tools you have to get out of your own way, and to make sure that your players get out of their own way. The more you leave it to your players the more fun you'll have. But there are other tools as well. The hardest part of any sport is to get everything right - to get the ball where you want it, and when you want it, and to make sure that your players can react. It's like the old one touch game, on a bigger scale, and it's the one part of
