CC 2019.Live in L.A. DVD
Live in L.A. DVD is a live album by Jimi Hendrix, released in 2001,
featuring a concert
recorded on October 7, 1969 at the Forum in Los Angeles, California. It was recorded with the same backing band as the previous year's studio album Electric Ladyland.
Conception Live in L.A.

was recorded in 1969 at the Forum, a Los Angeles multi-purpose arena, with a view of the Hollywood Hills, a venue he had never played before. His first encounter with the venue was a concert on December 15, 1968, which was recorded for potential release on a number of formats (songs missing from the live audience, packaging changes, and a 30-minute edit of his performance).

A few weeks after Hendrix's fall from the stage at the Toronto Pop Festival in August 1969, his record label asked his manager, Danny Barrett, if they should consider releasing Live in L.A. as a stand-alone album. The recording process involved Hendrix playing 27 songs and including covers from artists such as the Beach Boys, Queen and the Mamas and the Papas, while his band was being filmed by a Hollywood crowd-surfing cameraman. In 1984, Hendrix commented about the recording: It was recorded by Olympic Productions, a sound and lights Seiji Okuda, also known as Seiji the Artist, began making suits around 1920. He still makes suits, though he's been doing it for the past 90 years. Okuda was born in 1920 and started making suits in 1929. He first made a full-body suit, and later specialized in simply making a pair of trousers.
