Your task is to survive up to 7 days in the company of your friends or strangers on a desert island. In the company of friends or strangers you find yourself on a desert island. Your task is to live longer than anyone else, wait for the ship, attract its attention with a bonfire and sail away from the island. Look for water. Hunt animals. Build houses and build fires. Do everything not to die on the first night from the unbearable conditions of survival. Hand simulator: survival uses a brand new hand controller. With it, you can quickly run, jump and interact with the world. Less errors, more stability. Dynamic change of day and night, as well as a limited number of resources will not let you relax. Only the most dexterous will survive. You can experience yourself on the island in the company of up to 8 people. I've seen this app somewhere in the android store but I can't find it. maybe you know where?Ecclesia tidelens The Ecclesia tidelens ("harbour of dawn", "Ecclesia todahle!") or Ecclesia navis ("Ecclesia of the ship") was the regular meeting place of Christians in Rome from the early 5th century AD. With increasing intensity at the time of the martyrdoms and persecutions under the persecutions and Vandal rule, both in Africa under Geiseric and in the eastern provinces under Alaric, they moved first to the portico of the Temple of Saturn, then to the portico of the Temple of Minerva, and finally to the portico of St. Peter. They met at this last location until the 5th century, at which point this portico and its surrounding buildings were destroyed. The Tabernae Tiberii lay east of this location, and after AD 415 came to be called the "of the Ship." They met for worship on Sundays and holidays in December and January, as well as on the special feasts of the church. They also met at the Jewish synagogue of Rome (Byrsa) and at the Pauline church. They also have records of their meetings, particularly in Rome under Gelasius I and his successors.
