Whether you are looking for a new profession, preparing for a competition or just want to add some creative flair to your images, you can use Photoshop to make really good looking images. With its many tools and options for editing, you can make your work look great. This tutorial will show you how to edit an image in Photoshop using the tool palette. You'll learn how to apply a variety of different filters, mask the image, adjust the image layer, resize and transform images and much more. Steps Photoshop is a tool for professionals - does that mean you can't use it? Photoshop has become a standard in many areas such as web design, media creation and print design. It's also a popular image manipulation software for creating and editing images. Photoshop is not just for professionals. In fact, many beginners find that it's the most intuitive and convenient way to edit images. This tutorial will give you a comprehensive understanding of how to edit an image in Photoshop. How does Photoshop work? Photoshop is based on layers. The image you see on your screen is a raster image. Raster images are made up of pixels that are rendered on a computer screen. A pixel is a little dot that creates a picture on the screen. Raster images can easily be changed because you can edit the pixels as you see fit. Layers are the other part of Photoshop. Layers are placed over an image to create different effects to it. They are similar to creating different overlays, as shown in the image to the right. These layers are displayed as icons on the layers panel. When you edit an image with Photoshop, you can separate the image into many different layers, like the one in the image to the right. This way, you can edit each layer individually, allowing you to create the image in different ways. You can use a variety of tools when working with layers. In the image to the right, you'll see a dotted box with the Toolbox icon. To the left of the dotted box are three icons; the Brush, the Lasso and the Quick Selection. The Brush allows you to paint new shapes and colors to the canvas. To the right of the icon are three shapes, which are explained in more detail below. To the left of the Lasso icon is a shape that allows you to draw freehand to create a selection. The Quick Selection

The use of electrically conductive polymer dispersions in the manufacture of anti-static surfaces is well known in the art. The various requirements and properties of such conductive polymer dispersions are described in the paper "Electrically Conducting Polymer Dispersions" by D. W. van Krevelen and H. G. Gruber (Conference Proceedings--Electrically Conducting Polymers '87 (American Chemical Society, 1987), Vol. 1, pp. 24-32). The polymers utilized as anti-static agents in the manufacture of anti-static surfaces must have several requirements. First, the anti-static polymer must provide a uniform coating on the surface. Secondly, the coating must be sufficiently conductive so as to develop an electric field to prevent accumulation of static charges. Furthermore, the conductive polymer should be sufficiently durable to resist erosion and flaking. Finally, the resistance of the coating should be low. Generally, a conductive polymer composition having adequate anti-static properties should possess a resistance of less than 10.sup.10 ohm-cm. The composition of electrically conductive polymers is known in the prior art. See, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,898,913. The use of dispersions of electrically conductive polymers in the preparation of anti-static coatings is generally disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,223,631. The use of electrically conductive polyanions is generally disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,187,312. The disclosures of all the patents mentioned herein are incorporated herein by reference. Conductive polymer compositions containing small amounts of polyanionic functional groups are taught in U.S. Pat. No. 4,783,330, which describes conductive coating compositions containing polymers having a sufficient number of sulfonate groups and a charge density low enough to avoid the sensitizing effect caused by the sulfonate groups. The composition of this patent also requires a crosslinking agent which is added in an amount of from about 0.1 to about 20 percent by weight of the polymer. U.S. Pat. No. 5,019,472 describes a conductive coating composition which can be applied to non-conducting surfaces and which is stable over time and which is capable of developing a low electrical resistance. The coating described in this patent comprises a conductive polymer, a crosslinking agent, and
